

Apparel Made Accessible.

A group of four young people are posed in a graffiti-covered urban setting. In the foreground, a young woman with dark hair in two buns, wearing a purple t-shirt, tan shorts, and green-tinted sunglasses, is leaning forward with one hand extended. Behind her, a young man in a dark grey t-shirt, dark jeans, a bucket hat, and a chain necklace is making a hand gesture. To the right, another young man in a green hoodie and dark pants is adjusting his sunglasses. In the background, a young woman with blonde hair, wearing a pink hoodie and a black cap, is also making a hand gesture. The background wall is covered in colorful graffiti, and the ground is paved asphalt.

ABOUT US

Apparel made Accessible:
that's not just a tagline,
it's why we exist.

We make blank basics: tees, hoodies and shorts washed to look like they've already been worn in. Quality fabric with fair prices, nothing tacked on.

We started Urban Basic because good apparel shouldn't mean overpaying, and affordable shouldn't mean settling.

So we built something in between: rooted in the streets, made to last, priced for everyone.

Built for people who wear them, and for brands who build on them.
